

Laurel Historical Society Virtual Program

Laurel, Maryland

Wednesday, May 11, 2022 - 7:00 pm ET

Dishing Up Black History: From Plates to Protests

Kalin Thomas has been covering African American heritage tourism for more than 20 years. This presentation looks at her coverage of Black-owned restaurants and historic sites, which tell the story of how African American cuisine has shaped the culture and helped feed the civil rights movement.

Kalin Thomas is an award-winning, multimedia storyteller who gets geeked about cultural heritage tourism, traditions and preservation. She is currently writing a book about her travels, entitled "DO YOU KNOW SHE'S BLACK? Musings of CNN's First Black Travel Reporter."

This virtual program is free and open to the public, but registration is required using the link in the post or on our website.

After registering for the webinar, attendees will receive an email prior to the program with instructions to connect via Zoom.

Donations are accepted through our online shop:

https://www.laurelhistoricalsociety.org/store/p120/Virtual_Program_Donation.html

www.kalinthomas.com

